NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Philip E. Mosely is professor of international relations and head of the European Institute of Columbia University. The articles by Messrs. Mosely, Possony and Carrington are based upon papers presented at a conference on "Western European Integration and the Future of Eastern Europe," held in Wiesbaden in September of this year and jointly sponsored by the Foundation for Foreign Affairs of Chicago, and the Institute for Middle and Eastern European Studies of Wiesbaden.

Stefan T. Possony is director of the International Political Studies Program of the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, at Stanford University.

C. E. Carrington is former professor of British Commonwealth relations at the Royal Institute of International Affairs, London.

David J. Dallin, who died last year, is the author of numerous books on Russia. His article will constitute a chapter of a forthcoming book containing his articles and essays, entitled From Purge to Co-Existence, to be published by the Henry Regnery Company.

Ernest J. Simmons is an authority on Russian literature.

The book reviews are contributed by: J. M. Lalley, associate editor of MODERN AGE; Thomas Molnar, author of The Future of Education; Kurt Glaser, professor of government at Southern Illinois University; Henry M. Adams, professor of history at the University of California, Santa Barbara; Frank Grace, professor of political science at the University of Michigan; C. P. Ives, formerly lecturer at Goucher College, now co-editor of the Burke Newsletter; Harvey Plotnick, attending the Law School of the University of Chicago; Jerzy Hauptmann, chairman of the Department of Political Science at Park College; Felix Morley, author of Freedom and Federalism; Ralph J. Mills, Jr., of the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago; Garry Wills, professor of classics at Johns Hopkins University.
